

(cell phone buzzes, he doesn't answer)

ANDRE: I'm sorry for checking that, babe. I just thought it might be Nikki, she almost caught me texting you the other day. Your name in my phone is just "Foot Doctor." It just sounds so fake.

SARAH: You're in my phone as "Hot Wings Café."

ANDRE: How do people keep this up. Like, people really have whole other families for years. It's insane.

SARAH: I hate that I'm getting good at lying. Maybe we should stop.

ANDRE: I can't go back to the way things were. Every day is the same, day in and day out. With you, things are different. You're right about the lying thing though. I mean, this kind of shit doesn't last long-term. We're eventually going to get caught.

SARAH: Maybe we should do it for real then.

ANDRE: You serious?

SARAH: Yeah, everything inside me is telling I'm supposed to be with you. How many times does that happen in your life?

ANDRE: Well, this is my first, definitely.

SARAH: Me, too. So let's do it.

ANDRE: Okay, I'm in. (moves closer) So what do we do?

SARAH: I guess we have to talk to our spouses.

ANDRE: Yeah.

SARAH: Do we mention we've been seeing someone else or... what are you supposed to do.

ANDRE: I mean, if we're looking for a clean break, we got to be totally honest. Just put it all out there, they deserve that much.

SARAH: You're right. Should we do it tonight?

ANDRE: I don't know, what if we did it in like three weeks? Just because Sadie's birthday is coming up. We hired a bubble guy, she's like super excited. You know, I just don't want this to be that birthday that she remembers as the one that her dad walked out on her family. But three weeks. I promise I'll do it.

SARAH: Will that really be a good time? Don't you think there will be something else?

ANDRE: No. That'll be it really.

SARAH: If we wait until after the party, my parents are visiting. I can't do it while they're here.

ANDRE: And then the holidays are after that, so...

SARAH: We have to do it now. After we tell them it will be over. Then we can be happy together.

ANDRE: Let's do it now.

SARAH: I love you.

ANDRE: I love you.