

GYPSY (COFFEE SHOP)

SIDNEY

I didn't know if I'd ever see you again.

JEAN

I think you'd prefer it that way.

SIDNEY

Hey Max, can you cover?

JEAN

I was actually just stopping by for a quick coffee. I have to get back to work.

SIDNEY

Don't writers work in coffee shops?

JEAN

Not all types.

SIDNEY

You want me to take you on a tour?

JEAN

Well, as long as you promise to give me that coffee after, sure.

SIDNEY

I'll make it extra special.

JEAN

Deal.

SIDNEY

Well, here we have the magic of the storeroom where I grind the coffee, wash the mugs. All the brilliant parts of being a barista.

JEAN

Well, I'm always up for an education.

SIDNEY

You gotta know where your coffee comes from - get to the source.

JEAN

Couldn't agree more. In fact, I was curious about your story.

SIDNEY

Well, I live in Bushwick and I work here. What else do you want to know?

JEAN

What it feels like to be you.

SIDNEY

And why's that?

JEAN

I don't know, you clearly have a strong effect on people.

SIDNEY

And how would you know that?

JEAN

From what you said the other night, about your ex.

SIDNEY

Sam? Yeah that is so over. Although, we did end up having a drink the other night.

JEAN

Oh yeah? How did it go?

SIDNEY

Yeah it was fine. I don't know, the whole time I just kept thinking I can't believe we ever dated.

JEAN

So why see him at all? Play with his feelings like that? I mean you're obviously aware that you're alluring and charming. Maybe he's still in love with you.

SIDNEY

Well, that's his responsibility. If he can't handle it, he shouldn't have come. I'm glad to know you think I'm so alluring.

(beat)

Oh um, Monday night my friend Josh is hosting this pop-up thing in Bushwick.

JEAN

I have plans actually.

SIDNEY

I thought you were curious.

JEAN

It's a little more complicated than that.

SIDNEY

Right, well it's off the Morgan stop at the old red lumber factory. If you feel like a change.
