JAKE

Why haven't you returned any of my calls or emails.

JANE

Jake come on. This is just too weird. We have to just never do what we did ever again... You're an adulterer and I am awful person, basically... I haven't slept in days. What we did was so wrong on so many levels.

JAKE

And it was so right on a couple of levels, too. Admit it.

JANE

No it wasn't. On no levels was it right.

JAKE

You can't say we didn't enjoy each other's company. Sitting at the bar, dancing...after dancing. Come on, you and I haven't had fun like that in 100 years.

JANE

Yes, because we're not supposed to have fun like that. We are divorced. (BEAT) Are you like what, unhappy at home? Does she not understand you? Or did you just want to know what it would be like with someone my age? What is this?

JAKE

I'd be lying if I said I never think about you, Janey. I think about you a lot. And no it's not perfect at home, obviously. Look at me. I've got three almost grown kids and I'm going to kindergarten interviews. I'm a walking cliché. And I can't literally, can't stop thinking about what happened in New York. Fate brought us together once, maybe it happened again. And I know you've moved on with your life, I get it. But you can't deny that something real and honest happened that night.

JAKE (CONT'D)

Can't we just go with it? See where it takes us? No one has to know.

JANE

Wow...

JAKE

You were so great, so loose and sexy. How often do you get to be like that? You can run and open restaurants and build the perfect kitchen. But what about having someone to hold you in the middle of the night?

JANE

Not high on my list these days.

JAKE

What if that someone is someone who's known you since you were 23? And loved you for most of your life.

JANE

Oh, man! I forgot what a good lawyer you are.

JAKE

Give this a shot, Janey. Life is short and it's tough. Don't discount what we have together. You know what they say, "People who live in nursing homes that have plants live longer... than the people with out plants."

JANE

So you're saying this is a healthy choice for me?

JAKE

Honey, I know it is.
