

Elizabeth:

Todd we got to Hurst. Listen to me. We got to Hurst. We got to him. He said there's no way that fire was arson. You know what that means? If there's no arson, there's no crime. Can you believe it?

Todd:

No I can't.

Elizabeth:

Oh, my god!

Todd:

It's just like I been saying the whole time.

Elizabeth:

Well Reeve's is on his way to the parole board right now. He said there's no way they won't regard this as exculpatory evidence. Todd, we have a real chance.

Todd:

Oh, I don't know, Liz. I'm not fixing to start hoping again. Hope is bad. I got ten days left. If I start hoping again, them ten days is gonna go by just like that.

Elizabeth:

I understand, but I'm hoping.

Todd:

You know what I was ruminating on just now while I was waiting on you.

Elizabeth:

No what.

Todd:

After all them terrible things I said to you I thought you'd given up on me.

Elizabeth:

Never. Never.
